Notes:

- Went through the outline/brief of my topic
- Structure/tone of the site
- Should feel like the Bauhaus itself, confident, clean, modern
- Strong grid with lots of white space
- Primary colors (red, yellow, blue) with black and white
    - Simple geometric shapes as accents (circles, squares, triangles)
- Clean geometric sans-serif + large bold headlines
- Large black and white photos so the color accents stand out
- Categorization: 4 pages, navigation across the top
    - Homepage: introductory (big bold hero section with the title)
        - What the Bauhaus was (German art and design school, 1919–1933, founded by Walter Gropius)
            - Combining art, craft, and function
        - Links into the other pages
    - History page: Weimar, Dessau, Berlin
        - Timeline or three panels (one for each city)
        - Ends with the school closing in 1933
    - People & Work page: key figures and what they made
        - Gropius, Mies van der Rohe, Kandinsky, Klee, Marcel Breuer
        - Photo + short description for each, not too lengthy
        - Examples of architecture, furniture, and typography
    - Legacy page: how Bauhaus ideas still shape design today
        - The White City in Tel Aviv, 2019 centenary
        - Sources at the bottom (Wikipedia + image credits)
